

Using Codat vs. Building it yourself

Companies choose to partner with Codat rather than attempt to build integrations in-house. This document explains some of the key reasons this choice is made.

Speed to market

Building a full set of integrations with all the financial software platforms your customers use will take a dedicated team of developers years. With Codat, you could be up and running in a matter of hours.

Rigorous standardisation of data between packages

Matching different data formats to one consistent standard requires many historical examples in order to ensure reliability. Thousands of datasets flow through Codat's platform daily which has enabled us to develop expert standardisation capabilities.

Platform maintenance and scalability

Financial software platforms change their API framework or database structures frequently. Codat is focused on reviewing and managing these changes and monitors each integration package for updates.

Expert ongoing support

Codat maintains and monitors each connection so you don't have to. Our developers have designed our system to be intuitive and provide expert ongoing developer support.

Global Coverage

We provide direct integration with all the leading financial platforms used by your small business customers globally, meaning you can achieve vast market coverage via our single API.
